I think that the time has come to get rid of morse code testing for licensing of amateur radio operators. All of the other high speed data communications available surely puts morse code into the last century. All of the branches of the military and commerical traffic has abandoned it's use and it's not likely to ever be brought back.
Simon Carraway